State Deputy Danny Lechner

A WORD FROM OUR STATE DEPUTY

Worthy State Officers, District Deputies, Grand Knights, and fellow Knights of the Mississippi Jurisdiction:

I was thrilled to see my Brother Knights at our State convention in Biloxi. The convention, I thought, went very well. Many Councils received well deserved awards. We had productive meetings and, as a bonus, got to share quality time with each other. The convention committee deserves our thanks for a job well done.

With our State convention behind us, we have started a new State year. I feel that this year will be the best ever. However, in order for us to accomplish this, we have to improve on membership retention and report submission. We can and will accomplish this through planning and training. We will disclose the plans at the Schools of Columbianism.

Change in leadership

As our State Deputy, Brother Daniel Lechner, announced at this year's State Convention, Dr. Paul Gospodarski has resigned as Chairman of the Bishop R. O. Gerow Memorial Fund, effective Monday, April 28, 2008, due to his declining health. Brother Lechner has named Dr. Paul as Chairman Emeritus of this Fund. Brother Lechner also announced that Deacon Larry Campbell was appointed the new Chairman. All future correspondence and/or checks should be sent to Deacon Campbell and a copy forwarded to Dr. Paul.

At the final Business Meeting, when this leadership change was announced, Deacon Campbell suggested that rather than telephoning Dr. Paul or e-mailing him, that a personal thank you letter/card be mailed to him. Such a personal thank you would be more appropriate than a telephone or electronic message. Dr. Paul's mailing address is:

Dr. Paul Gospodarski
4048 Venus Ave.
Jackson, MS 39212

Your cooperation in this endeavor would be greatly appreciated by Dr. Paul, his wife Cathy, our State Deputy, Brother Danny Lechner, and Deacon Campbell.

A Fourth Degree Exemplification is planned in Starkville for Saturday September 27th -Honoree will be

State Master Paul Gospodarski.

DON'T THANK ME!

From time to time, either from my brother priests or from good lay people throughout the diocese, I hear something like, "How many seminarians do you have? You are doing a good job, Fr. Kent!"

I appreciate the appreciation, but instead of making me feel good it reminds me how much work we vocation directors have to do to help vocations promotion become more and more the "job" of every single Catholic-clergy, religious, and laity. I am really and truly only as good as the referrals I get from parishioners and priests throughout the diocese, and I am only the tip of the proverbial iceberg when it comes to inviting men and women to consider the priesthood and religious life. If a man asks for an application to become a seminary candidate for our diocese, it is often the result of many people encouraging him, sometimes over the course of many years, by telling him that he should consider the priesthood.

This can happen in many ways and settings. For example, when families say grace before meals, parents can ask the Lord for more priests and religious and for their own children to remain open to the idea of a vocation in the church. Priests can provide a positive role model and regularly invite altar servers to consider the priesthood. Teachers and youth group leaders can make sure the topic of vocations is discussed regularly, and keep an eye out for those young men and women who show leadership and enthusiasm in matters of faith and service. Parishes can pray for vocations, such as through a weekly chalice-in-the-home program or during hours of Eucharistic Adoration, and give parishioners a way to submit the names of potential seminary candidates.

Besides the obvious fact that I cannot be present enough throughout the 65 counties of our diocese to become aware of potential candidates, our faith is very much a communal endeavor, not just a "me and Jesus" experience. We are saved by God through Christ within a faith community which celebrates the sacraments together; even private Confession happens through a priest who represents not only Christ but the whole Christian community. Priests and religious receive their call in that same context of community. I would never consider a potential candidate for seminary without finding out how he has lived his faith as part of a parish family. And so for seeing those who might have church vocations, the very best eyes we have are those of the laity, ministers, and pastors who make up our faith communities.

I'll know my job as Vocation Director has been fully successful when I overhear Catholics saying, "Look how many seminarians we have now! We are doing a good job!"

VOCATIONS FROM THE INSIDE

Most vocation stories begin with a young man living his life his own way, doing what he wants to, trying to set his own path in life. Mine certainly falls under that category.

Growing up, my parents always took me to Mass and CCD classes. I went willingly most of the time, and sometimes just because I had to. Eventually I began to like the idea of church, but not in the way of a career or a lifestyle, just as a place to go on the weekends.

In school, I seemed to have found something that I was called to do. I was a musician and, just like my father and mother, chose the trumpet as my instrument. By the time I was in high school, I was sitting high in all of the all-state bands. I took lessons from a symphony player and even made some high-profile contacts in the trumpet world. It seemed like everything was going great and I decided to pursue trumpet studies in college. After earning a full-scholarship and out-of-state waiver, I embarked on a journey that has taken me places I never thought I'd go. I entered college at Florida State University in the fall semester of 2002.

Before I went to college, I overheard a speaker at my home parish saying "when you go to college, you know, you'll lose your faith and fall away from the Church for a while, but most people do, you'll come back..." Now, I never confronted this speaker, and it's entirely possible that I heard an out-of-context statement, but since this was all I heard as I walked through the parish hall, I was shocked. I couldn't believe somebody saying that it's regular and even expected to "lose the faith" while in college. I made a decision that instant that I would, at all costs, avoid this "common" phenomenon. I was blessed to find a terrific Catholic Student Union (CSU) at FSU. There were 15 on-campus Bible studies throughout the week, a weekly conference with a religious or priest, retreats every semester, football game barbeques, etc. Being three states away from anybody I had ever met in my life, it was a good place to set a foundation. I found myself growing in the faith, rather than losing it.

As time went on and I met more people at school, I began having friends of my own and didn't feel the absolute necessity to hang out with people from the church. The academic career of a music major isn't much, but the time constraints of rehearsals, recital attendance, and practicing (3 hours a day!) can be quite draining. By my junior year I wasn't as involved in the CSU, but I still went on the retreats and played for Mass every week. It was this time that God chose to speak to me, though I had Him tuned out for quite a while.

My trumpet playing, the only thing I was really concerned with in the long-term, began to disappear. It's hard to describe what happened, and I still haven't really figured it out. The best way to describe it would be to use a sports analogy. Imagine feeling like you could be the next Tiger Woods, provided that you kept progressing at a constant level. Then, you realize one day that you're in a slump. And somehow, this slump spirals out of control, and you can't seem to find any of that talent you thought you had. Well, this is what was going on with me. I was at school on a huge scholarship because an area about the size of a quarter on my face used to work really well for playing trumpet. When this stopped working, I felt completely lost. I searched for answers and changed trumpet teachers at school. I tried a summer program where I studied with one of the world's best trumpet players. From time to time, I'd think I was getting better. But, the bottom line was that I was not making progress. Eventually, the professor at school told me I needed to reconsider my future. This was an all-time low.

During Christmas break of my senior year at FSU, I had some down time to reflect and realized something. I asked myself "Whatever happened to all that time I used to spend at CSU? And that goal I had of never losing my faith? What happened to the peace that I had in my life?"

I was asking big questions, and knew that the only answer was in my Catholic faith. I decided that, no matter what, I would return to all the CSU activities I'd been "too busy" for. Three weeks into the spring semester, I wasn't so concerned with my trumpet playing; at least I didn't see it as an imminent disaster. I had peace. Then, at a conference, one of the Brothers from the Brotherhood of Hope did a talk on discernment. In a room with 200 people, it's pretty easy to shrink into the crowd. But this night, it seemed like he was talking directly and only to me. I walked away and was shaken; it seemed like God was trying to get a message to me. I poured myself even more into the CSU events, going to Mass on Saturday mornings, praying at an abortion clinic, going to adoration, listening to EWTN radio, etc. I was reading Pope Benedict's encyclical and doing Google searches on "seminary" "priest requirements," etc.

Well, I sat down and talked with a Brother at FSU and he explained to me the typical formation process. I had decided that I needed to talk with somebody in the Diocese once I got out of school for the year. During my spring break, I visited Fr. Don Derivaux, who shared his own story with me. My parents began to suspect that I was up to something. After my fourth year at FSU was done, my scholarships expired. I was without a degree because I'd changed majors late into my time there, but I wasn't worried. I set up a meeting with the vocation director, Fr. Kent Bowlds, and from there, things moved swiftly.

My time in seminary has been a blessing and I'm thankful for all those who have supported me; particularly, my parents, Fr. P.J. Curley, Council 898, Vicksburg, Fr. Don Derivaux, and Fr. Kent Bowlds.

If you find yourself looking for peace in your life and don't know where to find it, slow down and listen: God may be calling you. God Bless,

BRANDON BEGINS ANOTHER BANNER YEAR

Council 10216, Brandon kicked-started another Fraternal year and it promises to be just as productive as years past. The award winning Council has already hosted a Founder's day celebration for St. Paul's. During which, they entertained Fr. Burke Masters, Vocations Director of Joliet, Illinois. Fr. Masters is also a former star infielder for the Mississippi State Bulldogs and is featured in the SEC Character Commercials.

Council 10216 would like to thank Madison Council 9543 for preparing the meal for this event.

The council has also sponsored a combination Mother's Day Breakfast and benefit baby shower. The Knights served almost 270 breakfasts and raised over $600 in cash. In addition to the cash, over $2000 of baby products were donated and distributed to the local Pro-life organization, Birthright.

WHAT IS THE BISHOP R. O. GEROW MEMORIAL FUND?

In the early 1950's the Knights of Columbus established the Bishop R. O. Gerow Memorial Fund. This memorial fund was established to raise monies to assist the Diocese of Natchez-Jackson with the education of seminarians. In 1978 the State of Mississippi was divided into two separate dioceses. The 17 counties near the Gulf Coast became the Diocese of Biloxi and the 65 counties in northern Mississippi were renamed from the Diocese of Natchez-Jackson to the Diocese of Jackson. During all this time, since 1953, the Knights of Columbus have continued to raise monies to aid our dioceses with the cost of seminarian education. Throughout these years the Mississippi Jurisdiction has raised in excess of $1.6 million and given these monies to our bishop(s) for this purpose. We have become the "envy of the eye" of many jurisdictions in the country for the success we have had in this endeavor.

Throughout these some 55 years, the Bishop R. O. Gerow Memorial Fund has become known by a number of different names. Some of these are: The Priest Education Fund, the Priest Education Fund To Assist With Seminarian Education as well as the Seminarian Education Fund. In some councils, it may have even taken on other names, but throughout these many years the fund still remains the Bishop R. O. Gerow Memorial Fund as established by resolution of the Mississippi Jurisdiction, as I said in the early 1950's.

My purpose for pointing this out is to simply clarify, for some, a little of the history on the Fund. It is certainly not to create any problems that might interfere in any way with the good works and successes of the many thousands of knights, ladies, squires, families and individuals who have worked so tirelessly throughout the years to help our bishops with the ever increasing costs involved with the education of our "future shepherds" who have given, and continue to give their lives, in service to our Church in Mississippi, by serving in the Priesthood.

If in your area, the Gerow Fund has taken on one or more of these other names, that's fine, as long as our good works continue. The challenge ahead for us now is to find additional ways to increase the levels we can raise for our dioceses to meet the ever increasing costs of educating these men who will be our shepherds in the years to come. I certainly do not have the answer(s), but I am looking for ways in which our Order can be of even greater assistance with the ever mounting financial burdens placed upon the Diocese of Biloxi and the Diocese of Jackson. If anyone has any new ideas or thoughts, please let me know.

In closing, let me say thank you to the Knights who have preceded me as Chairman of the Bishop R. O Gerow Memorial Fund, not to mention the thousands, living and deceased, who have help raise that $1.6 Million over the past 55 years.

Attention all local Councils and Assemblies

If you have NOT already done so, you should take immediate action to file an IRS Form 990 as the new federal requires ALL charitable/non-profit organizations to comply. The 2 attached documents are for your information.

Filing deadline is 15 May 2008 if your activity's financial year closed out 31 Dec 2007. It depends on the amount of your gross receipts which Form 990 you use. If less than $25,000, you can file the easy to use Epostcard 990; more than $25,000 use the applicable Form 990. This is very important—failure to file could result in a fine and/or loss our your council/assembly losing its non-profit status. Contact IPSD Larry Tabor if you have any questions.
